The Temps protests against the rumors of mediation between France and China, and adds: "France will always pay great attention to England's counsels, but must see her claims in Tonquin recognised. It is not for England to offer mediation if China does not ask it." Furthermore it is stated that it is determined to entertain no negotiations for peace with China until the French occupy Bacnimh.

Norman Lockyer, the English astronomer, accounts for the "extraordinary 'sky glows," which have attracted so much attention. St. Petersburg, January 2d.—Harber telegraphs from Tomonsk his arrival there yesterday. He expects to reach Orenburg on the 15th instant. Harber has charge of the bodies of De Long and his comrades and is bringing them home via St. Petersburgh. At Orenburg Harber will strike the railway, which takes him to St. Petersburg in two days. He should reach New York February 1st.

A most harrowing calamity happened in the neighborhood of Toronto on the 2d January on the Grand Trunk Railroad. A suburban train left Union Station at 6:40. A car attached was filled with employes of the Bolt Works, who live in the city and were usually conveyed to their daily labor by this means. The train stopping for them opposite the works.

After turning the curve at Parkdale boundary, a freight train was observed coming cityward, but the impetus of both trains was too much to allow the brakes to do duty in time. and the result was a fearful smash up, ending in a shocking tragedy. Nineteen men employed at the bolt works were reported killed, and twenty or thirty wounded. The conductor of the freight train is said to be responsible for the accident, as he was running his train without orders. He has been arrested. The last accounts place the number of dead at twenty-seven.

Don't Lend Your Cigar.

The Pittsburgh Dispatch says that a man of letters was smoking and chatting with a physician on a Hudson River ferryboat when a stranger stepped up and asked for a light, "Let me give you a match," replied the man of letters, adding, after his petitioners had withdrawn: "I don't know how you feel about it. doctor, but for my part I very much dislike to put the end of my eigar back into my mouth after it has been fingered by Tom, Dick and Harry. I always carry matches with me, and make it a point to offer one of them instead." "And quite right you are," said the doctor, "I believe that some of the diseases can be conveyed by one man to another through the contact of his fingers with a borrowed cigar. I personally know of a case where varioloid was transmitted by means of a two dollar bill, and I firmly believe that varioloid and things much worse can pass from a man's fingers into a cigar and thence into the smoker of it."

Hanlan and Lee, the Famous Oarsmen.

About three thousand people assembled on Christmas Day to see Hanlan and Lee exercise themselves. The wharf had been prepared for the reception of the expected throng. Every "sure-thing" gambler known to the city of San Francisco was on hand, with his little device to worst the unwary, and the unwary marched up to the slaughter like little men. About 1:30 P. M. a heavy rain began to fall, and no doubt had the effect of keeping hundreds away, but before the rowing began the sky cleared, and the later boats were well loaded. The exhibiinstant. The following important news tion was given on a narrow canal, enclosed on the north by the Government training wall and The London Times has the best authori- on the south by the Narrow Gauge wharf. These structures act as perfect breakwaters, making the canal between them perfectly smooth. There was one touble, however. The tide was out and the water was barely deep enough for comfortable rowing. As it was, the Eastern stake had to be moved many yards seaward, considerably shortening the course which was of a mile long, and the oarsmen had to go around it twice to make the three mile distance agreed upon. When the word to start was given Hanlan got away first, but considerately eased up to allow Lee to keep him

When the boats were alongside of each other both men settled down to a steady stroke, neither gaining or trying to gain any advantage. In this style they rowed the distance out, Hanlan passing the winning stake about a foot ahead. The performance did not elicit either enthusiasm or applause. The spectators were critical, and quick to notice the manifest superlority of Hanlan's style, but no cheers were given for either man. Every one was satisfied however, for Hanlan, with honesty and candor, rare among professional athletes, had taken care to announce that he did not purpose to racesimply to exhibit himself in his boat, with Lee along, to make the show more effective. He had specially requested, too, that no bets be made on the result of the affair; yet some guileless Oaklanders persisted in tempting people to take their money by offering to bet as much as two dollars at a time that Lee would win.
